NEUROSEQUENTIAL MODEL

Building Connected Brains is about looking through the lens of the neuro sequential model in education. This workshop will support teachers and educators to understand concepts of how to apply this knowledge to their teaching and learning environment with children. If your early learning centre is wanting to learn strategies and techniques to support children's learning in social emotional development this workshop is for you. The neuro sequential model in Education is not a specific "intervention"; it is a way to educate staff about brain development and developmental trauma and then to further teach them how to apply that knowledge to their work with children in the educational setting, particularly those children with adverse childhood experiences.
